Teaching the World about Wolves

Pre-Visit Group Discussion and/or Journal Activity

A reflection of personal values towards wolves may help your group prepare for a planned visit to the International Wolf Center. You can encourage your group members to think about their values towards wolves with a group discussion, a journaling activity or a combination of the two. Such activities may help people realize how deeply their values influence their everyday attitudes and actions. Analysis of values is a very personal venture, please ensure these activities are conducted in an accepting atmosphere where everyone has the chance to think, express and be unique.

This activity can be paired with the Post-Visit Group discussion and/or Journal Activity for a “before and after” review of your group’s thoughts on wolves.

How do you feel about wolves?

Do wolves have value?

What is the wolf’s role in the ecosystem?

What are your expectations for our visit to the International Wolf Center?

What do you hope to learn during our visit?
